Molotov Claims Soldiers
Of Russia Being Badly Treated

LONDON, May 30—A Reuters (British) dispatch from Moscow said today that Soviet Premier-Foreign Commissar V. M. Molotov has protested to Lithuania against alleged kidnapping and torturing of Soviet soldiers.

The dispatch said Molotov demanded immediate steps to halt such practices and expressed hopes Lithuania would meet these demands and "not compel the Soviet Union to take other measures."

BUDAPEST — Italy and Russia have agreed that both powers will guarantee the present Balkan status quo, Budapest diplomatic circles said today. Yugoslavian public opinion, however, was reported "somewhat uneasy" owing to lack of official confirmation of reports that Italy has informed all Balkan governments of her peaceful intentions, in so far as the Balkan states are concerned.

MALTA—Schools in the British Mediterranean stronghold of Malta will close tomorrow for an indefinite period, it was announced officially today, as a matter of "simple prudence." (EDITOR'S NOTE: Latest reports from Italy have indicated that Italian action against the Allies may be imminent in the Mediterranean. In such an event the British base at Malta might be one of the first objectives of Italian attack.)

PARIS — The Vatican may be evacuated from Rome, possibly to Portugal, in case of Italian intervention in the war, the noted French woman commentator, Genevieve Tabouis, reported today. The article said Pope Pius could not properly exercise his functions in a warring Italy.

ITALY REPORTS SUICIDE OF GENERAL M. GABELLIN

ROME, May 30 — Il Popolo D'Italia today reported the suicide of former Allied Generalissimo Maurice Gustave Gabelin and the execution of General Corap, former commander of the French ninth army forces through which the Germans broke a gaping hole at Sedan.

LONDON, May 30—There is no confirmation in authoritative circles regarding reports that Italy has communicated a war decision to the British and French governments.

BERLIN, May 30—The British Expeditionary force is fleeing to the sea "in a state of complete dissolution," the Nazi high command asserted today with announcement that German planes have sunk three British warships and 16 transports off Dunkerque and Ostend.

The official communique issued from Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler's headquarters on the Western Front said: "The big battle in Flanders and Artois is nearing an end with annihilation of the British and French armies."

"Since yesterday the British Expeditionary Force, in a state of complete dissolution, has been fleeing to the sea, abandoning its entire inestimable war material."

LONDON, May 30—Terrific British aerial assaults in which 52 German planes were shot down were announced by the British air ministry today, while in Flanders the British Expeditionary Force still fought its way to the sea—with the final outcome as yet in doubt.

The air ministry announcement said the Royal Air Force yesterday shot down 52 enemy aircraft, including 25 bombers. Seventeen other German planes were seriously damaged, the announcement stated, and 10 British planes are missing.

Naval aircraft, it was stated, attacked a German sea-plane base on the coast of Holland, destroying hangars and wrecking a number of seaplanes.

PARIS, May 30—In a final, tremendous effort to rescue the Allied armies trapped in the Flanders-Artois area, French and British naval and air forces pounded today against German mechanized forces forming the Nazi iron ring.

The encircled armies, meanwhile, battled their way toward the coast in an attempt to escape by way of the English Channel. They were fighting a tremendous rearguard battle against the Germans.

This morning's high command communique contained little information beyond that given out last night. It stated:

"Various operations mentioned in yesterday evening's communique continued during the night.

"Violent fighting took place on the Yser and in the region of Cassel.

"On the Somme and along the remainder of the front there were no new developments."

A Reuters (British) dispatch from Paris said it was stated authoritatively that up to last night the Germans were unable to break the Allied positions in the North. The Anglo-French retreat to the coast is continuing amid heavy fighting, Reuters said, and "not a single French unit has surrendered."

Reports that the floodgates of the Yser River near Nieuport had been opened to cover the retreat were not confirmed in Paris, where the war ministry said it had no knowledge of such a move.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The London Daily Herald reported from Paris that Lille, Roubaix and Tourcoing were seriously threatened and that flooding operations were imminent. Yesterday's German war communique claimed capture of Lille as well as Ostend, Bruges, Ypres, Armentieres and other points.)

F. D., SOLONS TOO BUSY TO ENJOY DAY

WASHINGTON, May 30—While a reverent nation placed flowers on the graves of Americans who died in battle, President Roosevelt spent Memorial Day at his desk urgently working out a national preparedness program that will probably exceed four billion dollars in cost.

It will be the most stupendous single peacetime outlay for armaments in all history. Increasingly gloomy news from Europe's battlefronts pushed the defense machine into higher gear.

The President assembled his new National Defense Council in his office this noon for preliminary consultation and advice.

Ranking officials of the army meanwhile worked feverishly on a program demanding of congress immediate appropriation of a sum between six hundred million and a billion dollars in excess of earlier requests for more planes, more tanks, more anti-aircraft guns and speedier mechanization of the military establishment.

Called in by the President for emergency work were such outstanding industrial figures as General Motors President William W. Knudsen and U. S. Steel Chairman Edward R. Stettinius, Jr.; Labor Leader Sidney Hillman; Federal Reserve Board Member Chester Davis, who is an expert on agricultural problems; Railroad Executive Ralph Budd, specialist in the transportation field; Securities Exchange Commission Member Leon Henderson, who will be charged with stabilizing raw material prices; and Dean Harriet Elliott of the University of North Carolina, who will be called on to protect consumer interests.

Before a crowd which filled the high school auditorium to capacity, C. F. Zaenglein, director of instrumental music at Circleville High School, presented the high school orchestra, the high school and the junior school band in their tenth annual public concert Wednesday evening.

Outstanding feature in the program were two selections by the high school orchestra, two accordion solos by Dorothy Glenn, three numbers by the junior band, a saxophone solo by Jackie Miller, a trumpet trio by Jack Goldsberry, Robert Kline and Delbert Puckett, and two selections by the senior band.

The crowd was estimated at 600.

ber of bills deemed essential by the administration to an adequate preparedness program.

Already passed by the Vinson 11 percent naval expansion bill during the day and sent it to the White House for Presidential signature. Already passed by the house, this measure would provide for 21 to 23 new combat ships at an estimate overall cost of $655,000,000.

Leaders said it was possible that the senate might even reach a favorable vote on the house measure authorizing 10,000 new navy planes, 16,000 new pilots and 20 new air bases.

From the State Department came a decree by Secretary Cordell Hull which—in line with "measures short of war"—would permit the flying of planes purchased by the Allies to Canadian embarkation points.

Today's interest in the feverish movement to safeguard America centered around the White House meeting of the National Defense Council, and the preparation of a still further expansion of the army's mechanized forces.

The President was expected to tell his advisory group of experts approximately what he outlined in last Tuesday's press conference—that he expected each in his own field to do away with production obstructions, labor troubles, profiteering, etc.

The new army program which will be sent to congress, probably the first of next week, superimposes on the $3,300,000,000 already requested, a sum adequate to give the American military establishment powerful striking force against any invader.

GMC COULD PUT OUT 1,000 NEW CARS EACH DAY

NEW YORK, May 30 — General Motors could probably match the offer of Henry Ford to produce war planes for the United States at the rate of 1,000 a day, according to William S. Knudsen, G.M. president.

That was the assurance Knudsen had left today in New York where he stopped over briefly enroute from Detroit to Washington for the first meeting today of President Roosevelt's newly created advisory commission on national defense of which the G.M. president is a member.

Asked whether he believed Ford could produce planes at such a tremendous rate, Knudsen replied:

"Naturally, if he said so."

"Could General Motors do it so?" he was asked.

"I guess we could do it if we laid plans for it," said Knudsen.

Controversy Holds Up School Teachers' Pay

Pickaway County school teachers stood by Thursday awaiting the outcome of a controversy between Democratic and Republican state officials that threatened to delay their final pay checks of the Spring semester.

Money to pay Circleville and Pickaway County teachers was approved more than a week ago, but Clerk Clarence Barnhart has not received Circleville's check and neither has Superintendent G. D. McDowell received any certification for the various county schools.

The "battle" began when State Auditor Joseph T. Ferguson, a Democrat, informed Governor Bricker and other Republican state officials that because of a "shortage" in the treasury, he would be unable to honor school foundation and teachers' retirement fund vouchers totaling $12,039,150, due tomorrow.

Bricker countered by charging it was a "political move" on Ferguson's part and threatened to order a mandamus action instituted to (Continued on Page Three)

Circleville Observes Memorial Day Despite Downpour After Parade

Wars in Europe and the Far East cast grim shadows today on the observance of Memorial Day in Circleville and Pickaway County, but they failed to keep organizations and individuals from paying tribute to America's war dead.

In practically every community in the state, some observance of the occasion was scheduled throughout the day under auspices of civic, military, fraternal, patriotic and church organizations.

Rain in many cities and overcast skies in others cut down crowds attending the various events, but failed to dampen the ardor of persons paying tribute to heroes of all wars. A downpour washed out the Circleville ceremony in Forest Cemetery. The program directed by E. C. Ebert, of Howard Hall post, American Legion, in conjunction with other organizations, was carried out in Memorial Hall.

A corps of veterans paraded to the High Street cemetery for brief, but fitting services, and then joined in a colorful parade to Forest Cemetery where services had been arranged. School bands, Veterans of Foreign Wars band and the American Legion drum corps, all bedecked in their finest attire, paraded with school children joining in the procession. Cars carrying veterans of the Spanish-American war and ladies of the Relief Corps joined in the parade. The auxiliary of Henry Page Folsom Post, Veterans of Foreign Wars, and others were in the line of march, many persons carrying flowers to place on graves.

BELGIAN KING'S FALL ANSWERS MANY BELIEFS

Washington Columnists Say Nation's Leaders Opposed Battling Invaders

SECRET WEAPONS SCORED

Failure Of Mighty Forts To Do Their Duty Studied By U. S. Experts

By Drew Pearson and Robert S. Allen

WASHINGTON, May 30—With the surrender of Belgium, U. S. military observers believe they now have the key to the amazing capitulation earlier in the war of Belgium's supposedly impregnable forts and the alleged secret weapons used by the Germans.

So far as U. S. Army experts can find out, and they have gone into it very carefully, it was no secret weapon. The only secret was a strong belief on the part of the Belgian High Command that it was a mistake to resist Germany. This was partially, though not entirely, shared by King Leopold himself.

As the war continued, however, Leopold swung more and more to this view. He was heartbroken over the destruction of Louvain and other Belgian centers of culture. He also saw at first hand the lack of cooperation between the French and the British and became convinced that they could not win.

Furthermore, German envoys were in conference with him during the terrific pounding which the Nazis were giving the Belgian army on the River Lys. And they pointed out that even if the Allies won the war, which was highly doubtful, every town and village in Belgium would be destroyed; and there would be no reparations money forthcoming from Germany or any other country to pay for the damage. All countries would be ruined.

Finally, it is important to note that Belgium is divided into two racial groups, and the Flemish population has leaned towards Germany. Of late King Leopold had been flirting with them, and this accounts in part for his absolute refusal to have any military defense talks with France even when Norway was invaded.

It was a foregone conclusion that the Belgian Cabinet would oppose Leopold's decision. They were in Paris along with several hundred thousand other Belgian refugees. Naturally they did not want to take a stand which would jeopardize the position of these refugees in France.

As for the surrender of Belgium's famous line of fortresses, U. S. military experts have cabled from the front that no secret weapons or gases were used, and that by every rule of warfare they should have stood out against any enemy for at least three to

"Flight Angels" Comes to Grand

THEATRES

AT THE CLIFTONA

Once more illustrating the fact that truth is stranger and more dramatic than fiction, "Edison, the Man," filmization of the career of Thomas A. Edison, opens next Sunday at the Cliftona Theatre with Spencer Tracy in the starring role.

Biographies have proved among the most popular offerings in Hollywood history during the past few years and the story of Edison is replete with dramatic events which are so thrilling they might be considered the product of a fiction writer's mind. In fact, so many amazing events and so much intriguing humanness were found in the inventor's life that Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's greatest job was in selecting the most entertaining and weaving them into a dynamic story.

The picture affords Tracy with yet another great real-life role to add to the others with which he has won acting acclaim. As in the portrayals of Father Flanagan in "Boys Town," Henry M. Stanley in "Stanley and Livingstone" and Major Robert Rogers in "Northwest Passage," Tracy plays the Edison role wholly without makeup until, in a brief prologue and epilogue, he portrays the beloved inventor at the age of eighty-two.

Every background in this picture is authentic to the smallest detail and all of Edison's early inventions were accurately reproduced to a point where they actually operated as they did in Edison's day.

The story is basically a young man's story since it begins when Edison is only twenty-two, arriving in New York as an unknown and almost penniless young man seeking opportunity. It carries him through his courtship, his family life as a husband and father, and through his most fruitful inventive years when he created the phonograph at the age of thirty and the incandescent light at the age of thirty-two.

With Tracy in "Edison, the Man" are Rita Johnson, Lynne Overman, Charles Coburn, Gene Lockhart, Henry Travers and Felix Bressart. The picture was directed by Clarence Brown, director of scores of hits, and was produced by John W. Considine, Jr., producer of "Boys Town" and "Young Tom Edison."

Dr. Otto Mees, Graduation Speaker, Classed as Dean of College Heads

Dr. Otto Mees, president of Capital University, Columbus, who addresses the Circleville High School graduating class at commencement exercises Monday evening, is one of Ohio's best known educators.

Possessor of degrees of master of arts, doctor of divinity and doctor of law, Dr. Mees has been president of Capital University for the last 28 years.

President Mees is widely known as a preacher, scholar, author, lecturer and musician and through his long affiliation with Capital University has become a dean among American college presidents. His popularity as a public speaker keeps him constantly on the speaker's platform, having appeared before thousands of American audiences. He delivers as many as 25 high school and college commencement speeches a month during the commencement season and his audiences range all the way from the average high school commencement audience to over 20,000 who gathered to hear him address a public mass meeting in the Coliseum recently in Columbus.

Becoming the president of Capital University at the age of 33 made Dr. Mees the youngest college president of his time—back in 1912. In fact, it may be said that the trend toward calling young men to the college presidency was ushered in by his call to this office. During his twenty-eight years at Capital, the University enrollment has increased five-fold, building and equipment facilities have tripled and the institution of which he has charge has become one of the leading small universities in the Middle West. He was one of the five individuals considered for the presidency of Ohio State University.

Many Honors Bestowed

Honors in abundance have been bestowed on President Mees. His name appears in Who's Who in America, prominent Universities have conferred degrees upon him, and he has headed various associations, including the presidency of the American Lutheran Conference, a body with a membership of 1,500,000. He is a member of a distinguished family which has in three generations sent 38 men into the ministry. This unusual fact received widespread publicity recently in Ripley's "Believe it or Not" column.

One of the great qualities of President Mees is his influence with college young people. He has, through his ability to inspire, helped many a college youth over rough going and on to success.

A successful alumnus recently wrote to him, "Now that one of my ambitions has been realized I am moved to express my thanks and appreciation to you for the kind words you wrote home about me when I was not doing so well at school. I hope to live up to them and make Dad 'proud of me'."

ORIENT SCHOOL CHILDREN GIVE $2 TO LIBRARY

Children of the Orient, Scioto Township, grade school recently presented $2 to the Public Library, the money being gathered during the school year by the 15 youngsters who comprise Pickaway County's smallest school.

The money was presented by Mrs. Erma T. Young, teacher of the school, who told librarians: "The children raised some money this year, and want to present $2 to the library as a token of appreciation for the library service."

The pupils sold candy, presented plays and did numerous other things to raise the money. It means more than just $2. They would rather do this than get a ball and bat or something for the playground.

Mrs. Young explained that the school has no books of its own—no library facilities except the bookmobile on which it depends for supplementary reading.

"The children not only borrow books for school use and recreational reading, but also withdraw books for their parents," Miss Frances Alderson, county extension librarian, said today. "This is true of other schools all over the county."

Some families, unable to buy books or magazines depend almost entirely on the library for reading material. Others, reading is the only form of recreation in many

"The railroads play a tremendous role in the development of our country. They serve every one of our forty-eight states. They bring our people more closely together and knit them into a cohesive national unit. Other transportation agencies, such as water, air, bus and truck have their place in the economic life of America, but the railroad still predominates. These may supplement the railroad, but they can never replace it. From three-fifths to two-thirds of all of our transportation needs the railroads can and do meet. They have proven their ability and their capacity. We must, therefore, keep them financially sound and physically strong. They are the blood stream of American life in peace and in war."

Louis Johnson
Assistant Secretary of War

Thus spoke the Honorable Louis Johnson, Assistant Secretary of War, in Washington, D. C., on April 26, 1940, at the dedication of a bronze tablet commemorating the patriotic services and achievements of the railroads in 1917.

Today, throughout the length and breadth of America, as millions pay reverent tribute to the memory of those who gave their all for their country, it is fitting to take stock and to realize that preparedness is vital to America's security among the nations of the world.

And today, it is good to know that the American railroads are prepared to meet any national emergency. Constantly improving and modernizing their transportation plant, they have reached the highest peak of efficiency and service in their history. They have created and perfected an adequate, smooth-running organization—a far-flung transportation system that is the "blood stream" of national defense.

SECRET WEAPONS SCORED

Failure Of Mighty Forts To Do Their Duty Studied By U. S. Experts

By Drew Pearson and Robert S. Allen

WASHINGTON, May 30—With the surrender of Belgium, U. S. military observers believe they now have the key to the amazing capitulation earlier in the war of Belgium's supposedly impregnable forts and the alleged secret weapons used by the Germans.

So far as U. S. Army experts can find out, and they have gone into it very carefully, it was no secret weapon. The only secret was a strong belief on the part of the Belgian High Command that it was a mistake to resist Germany. This was partially, though not entirely, shared by King Leopold himself.

As the war continued, however, Leopold swung more and more to this view. He was heartbroken over the destruction of Louvain and other Belgian centers of culture. He also saw at first hand the lack of cooperation between the French and the British and became convinced that they could not win.

Furthermore, German envoys were in conference with him during the terrific pounding which the Nazis were giving the Belgian army on the River Lys. And they pointed out that even if the Allies won the war, which was highly doubtful, every town and village in Belgium would be destroyed; and there would be no reparations money forthcoming from Germany or any other country to pay for the damage. All countries would be ruined.

Finally, it is important to note that Belgium is divided into two racial groups, and the Flemish population has leaned towards Germany. Of late King Leopold had been flirting with them, and this accounts in part for his absolute refusal to have any military defense talks with France even when Norway was invaded. It was a foregone conclusion that the Belgian Cabinet would oppose Leopold's decision. They were in Paris along with several hundred thousand other Belgian refugees. Naturally they did not want to take a stand which would jeopardize the position of these refugees in France.

As for the surrender of Belgium's famous line of fortresses, U. S. military experts have cabled from the front that no secret weapons or gases were used, and that by every rule of warfare they should have stood out against any enemy for at least three to

THEATRES

AT THE CLIFTONA

Once more illustrating the fact that truth is stranger and more dramatic than fiction, "Edison, the Man," filmization of the career of Thomas A. Edison, opens next Sunday at the Cliftona Theatre with Spencer Tracy in the starring role.

Biographies have proved among the most popular offerings in Hollywood history during the past few years and the story of Edison is replete with dramatic events which are so thrilling they might be considered the product of a fiction writer's mind. In fact, so many amazing events and so much intriguing humanness were found in the inventor's life that Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's greatest job was in selecting the most entertaining and weaving them into a dynamic story.

The picture affords Tracy with yet another great real-life role to add to the others with which he has won acting acclaim. As in the portrayals of Father Flanagan in "Boys Town," Henry M. Stanley in "Stanley and Livingstone" and Major Robert Rogers in "Northwest Passage," Tracy plays the Edison role wholly without makeup until, in a brief prologue and epilogue, he portrays the bearded inventor at the age of eighty-two.

Every background in this picture is authentic to the smallest detail and all of Edison's early inventions were accurately reproduced to a point where they actually operated as they did in Edison's day.

The story is basically a young four weeks. Undoubtedly it was the general sentiment inside the Belgian High Command, later shared by King Leopold, which caused their surrender.

Dr. Otto Mees, Graduation Speaker, Classed as Dean of College Heads

Dr. Otto Mees, president of Capital University, Columbus, who addresses the Circleville High School graduating class at commencement exercises Monday evening, is one of Ohio's best known educators.

Possessor of degrees of master of arts, doctor of divinity and doctor of law, Dr. Mees has been president of Capital University for the last 28 years.

President Mees is widely known as a preacher, scholar, author, lecturer and musician and through his long affiliation with Capital University has become a dean among American college presidents. His popularity as a public speaker keeps him constantly on the speaker's platform, having appeared before thousands of American audiences. He delivers as many as 25 high school and college commencement speeches a month during the commencement season and his audiences range all the way from the average high school commencement audience to over 20,000 who gathered to hear him address a public mass meeting in the Coliseum recently in Columbus.

Becoming the president of Capital University at the age of 33 made Dr. Mees the youngest college president of his time—back in 1912. In fact, it may be said that the trend toward calling young men to the college presidency was ushered in by his call to this office. During his twenty-eight years at Capital, the University enrollment has increased five-fold, building and equipment facilities have tripled and the institution of which he has charge has become one of the leading small universities in the Middle West. He was one of the five individuals considered for the presidency of Ohio State University.

Many Honors Bestowed

Honors in abundance have been bestowed on President Mees. His name appears in Who's Who in America, prominent Universities have conferred degrees upon him, and he has headed various associations, including the presidency of the American Lutheran Conference, a body with a membership of 1,500,000. He is a member of a distinguished family which has in three generations sent 38 men into the ministry. This unusual fact received widespread publicity recently in Ripley's "Believe it or Not" column.

One of the great qualities of President Mees is his influence with college young people. He has, through his ability to inspire, helped many a college youth over rough going and on to success.

A successful alumnus recently wrote to him, "Now that one of my ambitions has been realized I am moved to express my thanks and appreciation to you for the kind words you wrote home about me when I was not doing so well at school. I hope to live up to them and make Dad 'proud of me'."

THIRD ASHVILLE YOUTH ORDERED TO REFORMATORY

Glenn Wells, one of the three Ashville youths involved in the robbery of the Ashville Creamery and Crites Oil Company May 19, was sentenced to Mansfield Reformatory Wednesday by Common Pleas Judge Meeker Terwilliger. Wells had previously pleaded guilty of the indictment placed against him by the May term grand jury, along with his companions Russell Smith and Warren Pence, but his sentence had been delayed.

Pence and Smith were sentenced to Mansfield Reformatory after Judge Terwilliger has revoked 2-year parole on which each had been placed January 9, for stealing auto accessories.

Miss Alderson revealed that one patron at Derby walked more than two miles along a country road in dust, mud, or snow to meet the bookmobile. She always exchanged a basket of books for her family.

For many adults and most of the children the books borrowed from the bookmobile are a part of their education.

"We have had requests lately for Civil Service Examination information and two men, studying for a Stationary Engineer's License, are reading Shealy's Steam Boilers, Bailey's Handbook for Engineers, or something along that line," Miss Alderson said. "And recently a high school boy borrowed a book about termites for a science class report. If it isn't specific information that's wanted, children will tell me that Daddy would like a couple good western and mother wants a love story."

NAVAL AND AIR FORCES HAMMER AT REICH ARMY

claimed these forces captured probably the last German-held bridge-head on the southern side of the river, taking several hundred prisoners.

But the fury of the German assaults in the North raged unabated as the Nazis battled to complete encirclement of the trapped Allied forces, who struggled "with a heroism worthy of their traditions," according to a French communiqué.

This announcement also revealed that large fleets of the Allied navies and scores of planes plunged into action off Dunkerque to save as many of the men as possible.

Dunkerque, center of the action, was partly in flames. Covering the troop evacuations, warships and planes were locked in combat with dive-bombing German stukas while German artillery hammered the city.

Inland "suicide" units put up a terrific rearguard action to delay the Germans, but it was admitted the Anglo-French forces in Flanders had been split virtually in two.

Big guns of the Allied warships were stated to be masters of the situation at Dunkerque, the main evacuation point. About 30 miles of the channel coast—from Dunkerque to a point south of German-held Ostend, remained in the hands of the Allies.

An authoritative French description of the northern situation as "extremely critical" accompanied a high command announcement that the Allied troops were making "every effort to maneuver toward the coast at the price of heavy fighting."

"Although unceasingly attacked on both fronts to the East and West," said the communiqué, "they are disputing every inch of ground with the enemy and counter-attacking with as much obstinacy as bravery."

The communiqué stated the capitulation of the Belgian army opened to the Germans the road to Dunkerque, Ypres and Furnes.

Peril Increased

"From that moment," it continued, "under the commands of General Blanchard and Prioux and in close collaboration with the British army under General Lord Gort our troops have had to face increased peril. . . . The French navy is bringing them powerful support in the defense of their harbors and means of communications."

"Under the command of Admiral Abrial, the navy is employing a large number of ships engaged in supplying our entrenched camp at Dunkerque and the troops based on it. Land and naval aviation are cooperating throughout the entire time."

FOUR AMERICAN DRIVERS NABBED BY NAZI FORCES

NEW YORK, May 30 — Four American ambulance drivers previously reported missing have been captured by the Germans according to a Nazi radio announcement heard in Paris, the American volunteer ambulance corps reported today.

The captured men were listed as Albert Raymond, Chicago; Lieut. Louis Wehrle, Berne, Ind.; Murray Shipley, Cincinnati, and Jan Glowacki, Jersey City.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: It was unofficially stated in Berlin that German troops had captured several American ambulances and had converted them to their own use.)

James Wood Johnson, president of the A.V.A.C., reported that Col. J. V. Sparks, head of the volunteer service in Paris, had sent the following cable:

"German radio announced four drivers our group loaned to Miss Anne Morgan taken prisoners together with their ambulances. Trying to confirm."

Johnson said the men reported Nazi prisoners were assigned to the Ardennes sector.

Six more Americans meanwhile prepared to depart on the U. S. liner Washington tomorrow for Paris and front line duty as ambulance drivers with the A.V.A.C. They were John D. Wellborn, Washington, D. C.; James J. Gardner, New Rochelle, N. Y., and William M. Throp, Winslow Meadows, Herbert M. Whitcombe and Carl Berthold, all of New York City.

MORE SCATTERED RAIN EXPECTED DURING DAY

More scattered showers were predicted by the weather bureau Thursday to make the eighth consecutive day of precipitation.

NEED FOR PLANE MOTORS CITED BY U. S. EXPERTS

WASHINGTON, May 30 — Shortage of airplane engines for any large-sized U. S. air force is so serious that it may force the army to order suspension of motor deliveries to the Allies, it was learned today.

This, and two other so-called "bottle-necks" in the airplane industry, is causing serious consideration by U. S. military experts.

The other two obstacles, it was learned, are in obtaining aluminum, a raw material, and in the lack of skilled workers.

Reports meanwhile reached Washington that the Allies are having difficulty in obtaining complete airplanes from the United States. It was said that Canada is troubled by the fact that it can get plenty of U. S. planes without engines—but few motors.

Maj. Gen. H. H. Arnold, chief of the army air corps, recently told congress that lack of motors threatened to obstruct the defense program.

He said that there were only three major engine plants. A senator asked him if automobile plants could turn out airplane motors.

"No sir," he said. "They are manufacturing some parts for aeronautical engines."

OHIO PRODUCERS OF FOOD EXPECT SPLENDID YIELD

COLUMBUS, May 30 — The European war has food producers in Ohio guessing. M. W. Baker, federal-state supervisor of markets who has just completed a tour of agricultural areas, said today.

Canners and truck farmers have indicated that the war has caused increased tonnages in the basic farm products, Baker said. The estimates were based on contracted acreage of various canning companies throughout the state for tomato and sugar beet crops.

Tomato production for canning and other various tomato products has become a major industry in Ohio, Baker declared, and last year the state ranked second in the nation to New Jersey with 144,906 tons. Tomato growers estimate a 15 percent increase this year to handle the anticipated demands from abroad.

General crop conditions in Ohio are good, Baker said. Early potatoes are in fairly good shape, and later plantings are proceeding in the regular manner, his report showed. Onion plantings in the Ohio muck regions are on a par with last year and are in good condition despite some damage from recent wind storms.

Considering general weather conditions, Baker declared that outdoor vegetables, such as spinach, asparagus, set onions, radishes and rhubarb, are in fair condition.

FRENCH SENTENCE SPY TO DIE, BUT SHE'S IN BERLIN

PARIS, May 30 — If the French can put their hands on her, beautiful Baroness Von Einem may lose her head on the guillotine.

The baroness, who is now said to be in Berlin, is under sentence of death today. She was sentenced by a Paris military tribunal after being convicted as a German spy. Famed as one of Paris' most smartly-dressed women, she is the daughter of the general who led the last German offensive in 1918.

Decapitation, however, confronted an alleged accomplice, Jean Amourelle, stenographer in the French senate.

Aloys Aubin, former news editor of the newspaper Le Temps, and Leon Hirsch, an Austrian, were sentenced to five years in prison each.

The spy ring was uncovered in July of last year. The baroness fled just before the case broke.

compel the state auditor to "do your duty."

State treasurer Don Ebricht, a Republican, contended there was "plenty" of money in the state treasury to meet school obligations, and that even payment of that huge amount would leave a treasury balance of $2,400,000.

E. N. Dietrich, state education director, who is a Democrat, said thousands of teachers would be forced to get along without their final paychecks of the Spring semester because of the alleged shortage.

"I don't know whether the Bricker administration didn't collect enough money or whether they spent too much," Ferguson said. "The money just isn't here to pay out. I think they have been spending too much."

In a letter addressed to Ferguson, Bricker asserted that the day the school foundation fund vouchers were authorized by the board of control, there was a cash balance in the treasury of $13,034,383. He added that the amount authorized for payment to schools from that amount was $10,787,167.

"Every Board of Education, every school teacher of Ohio, every one interested in the public schools of this state will know immediately that for political motives you are attempting to withhold funds which are justly due them and which have been authorized to be paid them immediately by the controlling board," Bricker's letter to Ferguson stated.

"Unless these payments are made at once, I shall direct that a mandamus action be immediately instituted against you to compel you to perform your duty as State Auditor."

"The schools of Ohio shall not suffer because of your cheap political trickery as long as I am governor."

GERMANS CLAIM MAJOR DAMAGE TO FOES' SHIPS

BERLIN, May 30 — Three British warships and 16 transport vessels have been bombed and sunk off Dunkerque and Ostend, it was announced officially in Berlin today.

The announcement stated that yesterday afternoon and evening, strong German forces, including two flying corps commanded by Generals Von Richthofen and Grauert attacked British warships and transports at Dunkerque and Ostend which were scheduled to evacuate "the remainder of the defeated British forces."

At the same time it was announced that at Gelsenkirchen-Buer, two civilians were killed, four were seriously wounded and three were slightly hurt during an enemy bombing attack on the night of May 28.

The official announcement revealed that the German aerial attack off Dunkerque and Ostend was carried out on a tremendous scale.

"The attack was carried out by army and naval air forces," the announcement stated. "It concentrated on more than 60 objectives."

"Three warships and 16 transports, including some of more than 15,000 tons, were bombed and sunk."

"Thirty-one additional ships were hit directly and heavily damaged. They were partly rendered unmaneuverable and partly set on fire."

The Dunkerque Harbor locks were destroyed and the harbor proper is without water."

supreme power in the hands of the people and not in the hands of a few who maintain their rule by combined effort of propaganda and military force.

"To be a true American means to show a willingness to think in terms of national honor and loyalty to our country and its government. A person can best demonstrate his loyalty by supporting a policy of national defense," he declared.

He continued by declaring that some think a strong preparedness program is a threat to peace, but the speaker said that the United States should arm itself into a unit mighty enough to discourage any foreign nation from involving our land in a controversy.

"We have no territorial ambitions, no ancient hatreds to inspire us to go to war," he continued. "We want to be left alone, and a strong defense is the only means we can have of maintaining our independence."

Mr. Clark said: "We shall have fewer soldier heroes to mourn on Memorial Day if we have enough living soldiers, adequately and modernly armed and equipped to tell the world the United States will not be a pushover for any ambitious empire building foreigners."

Similar celebrations were scheduled during the morning and afternoon in various other towns and communities in Pickaway County. Whether they could be conducted depended on the weather which threatened to wash out all undertakings.

RED LEGS TAKE ON CHICAGO CUB OUTFIT IN PAIR

CHICAGO, May 30 — The second-place Cincinnati Reds and the Chicago Cubs, in fourth position in the National League, were to meet today in the first of a series in Chicago.

The Reds came to Chicago from Pittsburgh, where they beat the Pirates three out of four games to boost their standing to 23 victories and 10 defeats. Cincinnati won yesterday 4-0.

Bucky Walters, 30-year-old Cincinnati pitcher, held the Pirates to four hits. At the same time, he helped his teammates win by smacking out two of the Reds' eight hits off Joe Bowman, and started two double plays by expert fielding.

The victory kept the Reds ahead of the league-leading Brooklyn Dodgers in number of games won, but left them behind in percentage points. The Dodgers won 21 and lost eight to gain a percentage of .722 against .647 for Cincinnati.

BLUE RIBBON DAIRY

Why not satisfy that itch to be "tops"?

IT happens to the best of us. We all like to step out in something a little finer, a little smarter, a bit more able, than the other fellow has.

So when you can do that—and get a better buy in the bargain—why not step right up to the head of the class?

Just look around you. Can you name a sleeker, trimmer, neater, smarter-looking car than this 1940 Buick?

Do you see anything on the road that can keep pace with its husky, valve-in-head straight-eight engine—Dynaflash patterned for thrift, and electrically balanced after assembly to brand-new smoothness?

Ever see anything slicker than the way its soft, rear coil springs float the body serenely along, even though the wheels be dancing?

You won't find a bigger car anywhere at its price, measured bumper to bumper, nor one with a frame as heavy and stout.

You won't find cooling systems sealed under pressure, Fore-N-Aft Flash-Way Direction Signals with automatic cut-off, nor as many cost-free "extras" included in the price.

In short, here's your one best 1940 yardstick—but that's only half of it.

Here's big value—within your reach! Current prices begin at $895★ for the business coupe, delivered at Flint, Mich.; transportation based on rail rates, state and local taxes (if any), optional equipment and accessories—extra as usual.

Net of all that is delivered-to-you prices so close to lowest-price-field figures that you'll get most of the difference back in the higher trade-in value your Buick will have later on.

So go ahead—satisfy that itch to be "tops"! First step is to see the nearest Buick dealer.

★Prices subject to change without notice.

claimed these forces captured probably the last German-held bridge-head on the southern side of the river, taking several hundred prisoners.

But the fury of the German assaults in the North raged unabated as the Nazis battled to complete encirclement of the trapped Allied forces, who struggled "with a heroism worthy of their traditions," according to a French communiqué.

This announcement also revealed that large fleets of the Allied navies and scores of planes plunged into action off Dunkerque to save as many of the men as possible.

Dunkerque, center of the action, was partly in flames. Covering the troop evacuations, warships and planes were locked in combat with dive-bombing German stukas while German artillery hammered the city.

Inland "suicide" units put up a terrific rearguard action to delay the Germans, but it was admitted the Anglo-French forces in Flanders had been split virtually in two.

Big guns of the Allied warships were stated to be masters of the situation at Dunkerque, the main evacuation point. About 30 miles of the channel coast—from Dunkerque to a point south of German-held Ostend, remained in the hands of the Allies.

An authoritative French description of the northern situation as "extremely critical" accompanied a high command announcement that the Allied troops were making "every effort to maneuver toward the coast at the price of heavy fighting."

"Although unceasingly attacked on both fronts to the East and West," said the communiqué, "they are disputing every inch of ground with the enemy and counter-attacking with as much obstinacy as bravery."

The communiqué stated the capitulation of the Belgian army opened to the Germans the road to Dunkerque, Ypres and Furnes.

Peril Increased
"From that moment," it continued, "under the commands of General Blanchard and Proulx and in close collaboration with the British army under General Lord Gort our troops have had to face increased peril . . . the French navy is bringing them powerful support in the defense of their harbors and means of communications."

"Under the command of Admiral Abrial, the navy is employing a large number of ships engaged in supplying our entrenched camp at Dunkerque and the troops based on it. Land and naval aviation are cooperating throughout the entire time."

FOUR AMERICAN DRIVERS NABBED BY NAZI FORCES
NEW YORK, May 30 — Four American ambulance drivers previously reported missing have been captured by the Germans according to a Nazi radio announcement heard in Paris, the American volunteer ambulance corps reported today.

The captured men were listed as Albert Raymond, Chicago; Lieut. Louis Wehrle, Berne, Ind.; Murray Shipley, Cincinnati, and Jan Glowacki, Jersey City.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: It was unofficially stated in Berlin that German troops had captured several American ambulances and had converted them to their own use.)

James Wood Johnson, president of the A.V.A.C., reported that Col. J. V. Sparks, head of the volunteer service in Paris, had sent the following cable:

"German radio announced four drivers our group loaned to Miss Anne Morgan taken prisoners together with their ambulances. Trying to confirm."

Johnson said the men reported Nazi prisoners were assigned to the Ardennes sector.

Six more Americans meanwhile prepared to depart on the U. S. liner Washington tomorrow for Paris and front line duty as ambulance drivers with the A.V.A.C. They were John D. Wellborn, Washington, D. C.; James J. Gardner, New Rochelle, N. Y., and William M. Throop, Winslow Meadows, Herbert M. Whitcomb and Carl Berthold, all of New York City.

MORE SCATTERED RAIN EXPECTED DURING DAY

NEED FOR PLANE MOTORS CITED BY U. S. EXPERTS

WASHINGTON, May 30 — Shortage of airplane engines for any large-sized U. S. air force is so serious that it may force the army to order suspension of motor deliveries to the Allies, it was learned today.

This, and two other so-called "bottle-necks" in the airplane industry, is causing serious consideration by U. S. military experts.

The other two obstacles, it was learned, are in obtaining aluminum, a raw material, and in the lack of skilled workers.

Reports meanwhile reached Washington that the Allies are having difficulty in obtaining complete airplanes from the United States. It was said that Canada is troubled by the fact that it can get plenty of U. S. planes without engines—but few motors.

Maj. Gen. H. H. Arnold, chief of the army air corps, recently told congress that lack of motors threatened to obstruct the defense program.

He said that there were only three major engine plants. A senator asked him if automobile plants could turn out airplane motors.

"No sir," he said. "They are manufacturing some parts for aeronautical engines."

OHIO PRODUCERS OF FOOD EXPECT SPLENDID YIELD

COLUMBUS, May 30 — The European war has food producers in Ohio guessing. M. W. Baker, federal-state supervisor of markets who has just completed a tour of agricultural areas, said today.

Canners and truck farmers have indicated that the war has caused increased tonnages in the basic farm products, Baker said. The estimates were based on contracted acreage of various canning companies throughout the state for tomato and sugar beet crops.

Tomato production for canning and other various tomato products has become a major industry in Ohio, Baker declared, and last year the state ranked second in the nation to New Jersey with 144,906 tons. Tomato growers estimate a 15 percent increase this year to handle the anticipated demands from abroad.

General crop conditions in Ohio are good, Baker said. Early potatoes are in fairly good shape, and later plantings are proceeding in the regular manner, his report showed. Onion plantings in the Ohio muck regions are on a par with last year and are in good condition despite some damage from recent wind storms.

Considering general weather conditions, Baker declared that outdoor vegetables, such as spinach, asparagus, set onions, radishes and rhubarb, are in fair condition.

FRENCH SENTENCE SPY TO DIE, BUT SHE'S IN BERLIN

PARIS, May 30—If the French can put their hands on her, beautiful Baroness Von Einem may lose her head on the guillotine.

The baroness, who is now said to be in Berlin, is under sentence of death today. She was sentenced by a Paris military tribunal after being convicted as a German spy. Famed as one of Paris' most smartly-dressed women, she is the daughter of the general who led the last German offensive in 1918.

Decapitation, however, confronted an alleged accomplice, Jean Amourelle, stenographer in the French senate.

Aloys Aubin, former news editor of the newspaper Le Temps, and Leon Hirsch, an Austrian, were sentenced to five years in prison each.

The spy ring was uncovered in July of last year. The baroness fled just before the case broke.

With the coming of summer, Europe's cry during the night-blackout probably will be changed to "Swat that firefly!"

compel the state auditor to "do your duty."

State treasurer Don Ebricht, a Republican, contended there was "plenty" of money in the state treasury to meet school obligations, and that even payment of that huge amount would leave a treasury balance of $2,400,000.

E. N. Dietrich, state education director, who is a Democrat, said thousands of teachers would be forced to get along without their final paychecks of the Spring semester because of the alleged shortage.

"I don't know whether the Bricker administration didn't collect enough money or whether they spent too much," Ferguson said. "The money just isn't here to pay out. I think they have been spending too much."

In a letter addressed to Ferguson, Bricker asserted that the day the school foundation fund vouchers were authorized by the board of control, there was a cash balance in the treasury of $13,034,353. He added that the amount authorized for payment to schools from that amount was $10,787,167.

"Every Board of Education, every school teacher of Ohio, every one interested in the public schools of this state will know immediately that for political motives you are attempting to withhold funds which are justly due them and which have been authorized to be paid them immediately by the controlling board," Bricker's letter to Ferguson stated.

"Unless these payments are made at once, I shall direct that a mandamus action be immediately instituted against you to compel you to perform your duty as State Auditor."

"The schools of Ohio shall not suffer because of your cheap political trickery as long as I am governor."

GERMANS CLAIM MAJOR DAMAGE TO FOES' SHIPS

BERLIN, May 30—Three British warships and 16 transport vessels have been bombed and sunk off Dunkerque and Ostend, it was announced officially in Berlin today.

The announcement stated that yesterday afternoon and evening, strong German forces, including two flying corps commanded by Generals Von Richthofen and Grauert attacked British warships and transports at Dunkerque and Ostend which were scheduled to evacuate "the remainder of the defeated British forces."

At the same time it was announced that at Gelsenkirchen-Buer, two civilians were killed, four were seriously wounded and three were slightly hurt during an enemy bombing attack on the night of May 28.

The official announcement revealed that the German aerial attack off Dunkerque and Ostend was carried out on a tremendous scale.

"The attack was carried out by army and naval air forces," the announcement stated. "It concentrated on more than 60 objectives."

"Three warships and 16 transports, including some of more than 15,000 tons, were bombed and sunk."

"Thirty-one additional ships were hit directly and heavily damaged. They were partly rendered unmaneuverable and partly set on fire."

The Dunkerque Harbor locks were destroyed and the harbor proper is without water."

BETWEEN TWO EVILS

ASTORIA, Ore.,—Forest officials don't know which is worse—a forest fire or a few score beavers. For 80 percent of the young trees planted in Clatsop County over an old burn have been destroyed by mountain beavers. It had been so long since the forest creatures had seen trees in the area that they scorned poisoned bait spread in the areas by foresters, preferring instead the delectable young trees.

supreme power in the hands of the people and not in the hands of a few who maintain their rule by combined effort of propaganda and military force.

"To be a true American means to show a willingness to think in terms of national honor and loyalty to our country and its government. A person can best demonstrate his loyalty by supporting a policy of national defense," he declared.

He continued by declaring that some think a strong preparedness program is a threat to peace, but the speaker said that the United States should arm itself into a unit mighty enough to discourage any foreign nation from involving our land in a controversy.

"We have no territorial ambitions, no ancient hatreds to inspire us to go to war," he continued. "We want to be left alone, and a strong defense is the only means we can have of maintaining our independence."

Mr. Clark said: "We shall have fewer soldier heroes to mourn on Memorial Day if we have enough living soldiers, adequately and modernly armed and equipped to tell the world the United States will not be a pushover for any ambitious empire building foreigners."

Similar celebrations were scheduled during the morning and afternoon in various other towns and communities in Pickaway County. Whether they could be conducted depended on the weather which threatened to wash out all undertakings.

RED LEGS TAKE ON CHICAGO CUB OUTFIT IN PAIR

CHICAGO, May 30—The second-place Cincinnati Reds and the Chicago Cubs, in fourth position in the National League, were to meet today in the first of a series in Chicago.

The Reds came to Chicago from Pittsburgh, where they beat the Pirates three out of four games to boost their standing to 23 victories and 10 defeats. Cincinnati won yesterday 4-0.

Bucky Walters, 30-year-old Cincinnati pitcher, held the Pirates to four hits. At the same time, he helped his teammates win by smacking out two of the Reds' eight hits off Joe Bowman, and started two double plays by expert fielding.

The victory kept the Reds ahead of the league-leading Brooklyn Dodgers in number of games won, but left them behind in percentage points. The Dodgers won 21 and lost eight to gain a percentage of .722 against .647 for Cincinnati.

Why not satisfy that itch to be "tops"?

It happens to the best of us. We all like to step out in something a little finer, a little smarter, a bit more able, than the other fellow has.

So when you can do that—and get a better buy in the bargain—why not step right up to the head of the class?

Just look around you. Can you name a sleeker, trimmer, neater, smarter-looking car than this 1940 Buick?

Do you see anything on the road that can keep pace with its husky, valve-in-head straight-eight engine—Dynaflash patterned for thrift, and electrically balanced after assembly to brand-new smoothness?

Ever see anything slicker than the way its soft, rear coil springs float the body serenely along, even though the wheels be dancing?

You won't find a bigger car anywhere at its price, measured bumper to bumper, nor one with a frame as heavy and stout.

You won't find cooling systems sealed under pressure, Fore-N-Aft Flash-Way Direction Signals with automatic cut-off, nor as many cost-free "extras" included in the price.

In short, here's your one best 1940 yardstick—but that's only half of it.

Here's big value—within your reach! Current prices begin at $895* for the business coupe, delivered at Flint, Mich.; transportation based on rail rates, state and local taxes (if any), optional equipment and accessories—extra as usual.

Net of all that is delivered-to-you prices so close to lowest-price-field figures that you'll get most of the difference back in the higher trade-in value your Buick will have later on.

So go ahead—satisfy that itch to be "tops"! First step is to see the nearest Buick dealer.

*Prices subject to change without notice.

PETTENGILL

"The Gentleman from Indiana"

ROOSEVELT AND THOMPSON

Miss Dorothy Thompson has just said in her column that "the greatest thing the Republican party could now do for the nation it has served so often and so magnificently would be to announce, and as quickly as possible, that if the President will accept a third term it will offer no candidate against him."

Although H. V. Kaltenborn, radio adviser to the world, has placed his great authority behind this truly interesting suggestion, the Republicans have received it with something less than overwhelming enthusiasm. In fact, some hardy souls predict it will be rejected! Nevertheless, as a case study of dementia hysteria, it deserves comment.

Miss Thompson declared war against Hitler six years ago.

I, too, feel PETTENGILL strongly about Hitler. But I also feel strongly about Stalin.

Loathing Hitler and Stalin as I do, a question still remains upon which people can honestly disagree. It is whether to drain our blood on foreign soil, or become impregnable at home; whether to have a dictator on the Potomac in order to fight a dictator in Berlin.

That, I submit, is her program. She advocates nothing less than a "Hitler" election of an American President! She wants a one-party government, a one-man government. If her plan for an unanimous election of a third term President were to be adopted, America would become totalitarian over night.

Her government would be a government without discussion, without debate, without opposition. She deprecates the "spectacle" of "internal disunity." To her the democratic process has become a "spectacle." Discussion of vital public policies by 130,000,000 Americans is a "spectacle." Political parties, as a vehicle for discussion and decision, are a "spectacle." Elections are a "spectacle." Why have a Constitution that says there must be an election which involves all this discussion and debate? The people ought not to discuss the lives of their sons. Place that decision in the hands of Roosevelt and Thompson.

Why have a Congress? Would Miss Dorothy Thompson tolerate Congress disagreeing with her unanimously chosen third term President? Would she permit an American Lloyd-George to criticize her Fuehrer? Would she tolerate a Supreme Court holding that her third term President had trampled upon the American Constitution, as the Supreme Court in 1865 held that President Lincoln could not try civilians by army court martial outside military zones? Oh, no. We cannot have "disunity," she says. So why have a Supreme Court?

Would Miss Dorothy Thompson tolerate editorials in the press criticizing decisions made by her or her third term President? Would she permit public gatherings protesting his decisions or hers? Would she permit an American Pastor Niemöller to speak in an American pulpit? Would she permit labor organizations to protest against forced labor? We cannot tolerate the "spectacle" of "internal disunity." The "President's handling of foreign affairs has been masterly," she says. And so America is to have its "master."

Abolish parties; suspend elections; tell Congress to be still; put the Supreme Court in a dunce cap; crush labor organizations; wipe out a free press; forbid public gatherings; make the church the tool of the State, tear the Constitution into tatters. We have some really important work to do! We must abolish Hitler! And dictatorship abroad.

Roosevelt and Thompson, and Kaltenborn as Minister of Propaganda. That's the ticket. Rally round the flag, boys. Mothers, tell your sons to get ready. The Holy Crusade is on. It is a sacred cause. We must make America safe for National Socialism. Vandenberg, Garner, Taft, Wheeler, Dewey, Hull, Gannett, Farley—lay down your arms. Only One Man can save us! "Believe, Obey, Fight!"

Once there was a time called the Age of Reason. We now have the Age of Hysteria.

I know this piece may seem cockeyed to some. But when you realize that Miss Dorothy Thompson and H. V. Kaltenborn are not alone in this matter,—that there are thousands—the Dies Committee says a million—who would throw the American Constitution into the ash can, and millions who are being taught to scrap the anti-third term tradition as they would a last year's bird's nest, this piece is not cockeyed.

"The harm that good men do!" Miss Thompson once made a brave defense of the Supreme Court and the Constitution. No doubt, in her heart, she feels equally loyal today. But no member of any "fifth column" in America could do as much damage as hysteria such as hers.

Combat vehicles, 30-caliber machine gun (left) and 30-caliber anti-aircraft gun (right).

Here are some of the war materials which the U. S. army expects to get under the new defense program. Below each picture is a list of the items in that group which the army has on hand and the number it expects to have when the program is completed.

By Central Press
THE ARMY long has been the "neglected" branch of the United States fighting services when congress periodically passed appropriation bills for the armed forces of the nation.

Just as regularly as congress considered bills granting funds for the fighting services did army officers come forward with their requests for money for more anti-aircraft guns, more artillery, more material of all kinds. Usually the army men saw their requests piling up and trimmed until there was little left but the funds required to maintain the land forces at the level of efficiency and preparedness that they were at the time.

Since the beginning of the administration of President Roosevelt, a former assistant secretary of the navy, the admirals have been more fortunate in filling their needs. Large sums have been appropriated for the building of new ships and the addition of more men to the fleet.

Now the army's turn has come. Under President Roosevelt's special defense program, it is slated Additional U. S. Army Equipment to get more than $1,800,000,000, an unprecedented sum for army use during peace time. And the move has the whole-hearted backing of congress, as was evidenced by the senate's 74-to-0 favorable vote on the bill.

The funds are expected to provide 2,566 new planes, $103,300,000 in authorization for additional planes if they can be procured, a large increase in the number of pilots, an addition of 53,000 enlisted men, speeding up and enlargement of the mechanization program, greater training facilities, anti-aircraft guns, artillery and vital war material.

In anti-aircraft equipment, in particular, the army has been woefully weak. It has been estimated that the number of anti-aircraft guns possessed by the land forces would not be more than barely sufficient to defend New York City. And the United States has thousands of miles of coast line, great industrial centers, airfields, the Panama canal, Alaska and the island possessions to defend. This is to say nothing of the plan of hemispheric defense which is talked about so much.

Of the 90-mm. anti-aircraft guns which have been judged the most effective defense against air attacks, the army has none. It expects to acquire 217 of them with the new funds. At the present time the army has 448 3-inch and 15 37-mm. anti-aircraft guns. When the special defense program is completed, it plans to have 500 of the larger guns and 1,423 of the smaller.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

WASTING TWO FOR ONE
OVERTAKING your partner's honor to gain the lead is winning play on some occasions, but it involves a definite risk which should be weighed consciously. Every time you play one of your honors, you promote some lower card to a position nearer the top in that suit. Is the principal card promoted one which your side holds, or one in possession of the enemy? And, if the latter, is the advantage of getting the lead enough to outweigh the other factor?

Inasmuch as the contract can be beaten by three immediate top tricks, South's redouble seems rather over-ambitious. But he was against opponents prone to err on the defense, and perhaps counted on their play as worth a trick to him. They delivered the goods as he expected, and early in the game West led the spade K, then the Q. East decided his partner might have held a doubleton and therefore couldn't score a third spade at once, so overtook the Q with his A and then led a third spade, ruffed by South.

Quick as a flash the declarer ran game, cashing a high diamond, the heart A, the heart J on a finesse, the heart K for one club discard and the set-up spade 9 for a toss of the remaining club. From the fact that West did not lead the J to the second trick, East could have read declarer for that card, and hence should have feared the 9 which he could see in dummy.

This odd hand was played in the big spring tournament at the Skytop club, in the Pennsylvania Poconos. At one table psychic bidding by North got South into 3-No Trumps, which he made with the first eleven tricks when West led the 5 of his partner's club suit. Had he led the A, his side could have taken the first eleven tricks.

Here are some of the war materials which the U. S. army expects to get under the new defense program. Below each picture is a list of the items in that group which the army has on hand and the number it expects to have when the program is completed.

By Central Press
THE ARMY long has been the "neglected" branch of the United States fighting services when congress periodically passed appropriation bills for the armed forces of the nation.

Just as regularly as congress considered bills granting funds for the fighting services did army officers come forward with their requests for money for more anti-aircraft guns, more artillery, more material of all kinds. Usually the army men saw their requests pigeon-holed and trimmed until there was little left but the funds required to maintain the land forces at the level of efficiency and preparedness that they were at the time.

Since the beginning of the administration of President Roosevelt, a former assistant secretary of the navy, the admirals have been more fortunate in filling their needs. Large sums have been appropriated for the building of new ships and the addition of more men to the fleet.

Now the army's turn has come. Under President Roosevelt's special defense program, it is slated Additional U. S. Army Equipment

| Ammunition | On Hand | Will Have |

| Bombs, 500-lb. | 11,528 | 34,924 |
| Bombs, 1,000-lb. | 4,336 | 14,511 |
| 30-caliber cartridges | 17,268,000 | 75,920,000 |
| 50-caliber cartridges | 25,220,000 | 53,117,000 |
| 37-mm. mortar | 121,000 | 3,529,000 |
| 81-mm. mortar | 42,000 | 373,000 |
| 75-mm. howitzer | 142,600 | 382,000 |
| 155-mm. howitzer | 825,000 | 1,121,000 |

to get more than $1,800,000,000, an unprecedented sum for army use during peace time. And the move has the whole-hearted backing of congress, as was evidenced by the senate's 74-to-0 favorable vote on the bill.

The funds are expected to provide 2,566 new planes, $103,300,000 in authorization for additional planes if they can be procured, a large increase in the number of pilots, an addition of 53,000 enlisted men, speeding up and enlargement of the mechanization program, greater training facilities, anti-aircraft guns, artillery and vital war material.

In anti-aircraft equipment, in particular, the army has been woefully weak. It has been estimated that the number of anti-aircraft guns possessed by the land forces would not be more than barely sufficient to defend New York City. And the United States has thousands of miles of coast line, great industrial centers, airfields, the Panama canal, Alaska and the island possessions to defend. This is to say nothing of the plan of hemispheric defense which is talked about so much.

Of the 90-mm. anti-aircraft guns which have been judged the most effective defense against air attacks, the army has none. It expects to acquire 217 of them with the new funds. At the present time the army has 443 3-inch and 15 37-mm. anti-aircraft guns. When the special defense program is completed, it plans to have 500 of the larger guns and 1,423 of the smaller.

MEMORIAL DAY

MEMORIAL DAY has always been what its name implies, a day for remembering. Established at first as a time for honoring war veterans, it naturally developed into a day of remembrance for all the departed ones of war and peace, heroes and family members and friends. And in this form it becomes a sort of religious rite as well as a patriotic ceremony. In either aspect it is one of the finest and noblest of our American customs.

This year there is sure to be an unusual air of sadness in the ceremonies. The war clouds are gathering again. Across the sea millions of men are engaged in a fierce struggle and dying by tens of thousands. No one knows how far that human storm will spread or how long it will last. There are fears that it will yet engulf America, along with most of the civilized world.

Now, as we tend our graves and scatter flowers and hear salutes and eulogies for our heroic dead, we do it with less assurance than usual. Our thoughts wander. Listening, we can almost hear the cannon across the water. It is a small world and a perilous one. But those beneath the flower wreaths—they are safe.

WAR ON LIBRARIES

IT is, to say the least, a striking coincidence that the Louvain Library in Belgium should have been burned again, completely gutted and destroyed, with the entrance of the Nazi army. "No one seemed to be able to say how or by whom the blaze had been set," reported Louis P. Lochner, correspondent with the German Western Armies.

Perhaps it was merely a coincidence that, as the correspondent added, American newspaper correspondents observed the ruins of the library as "guests of Adolf Hitler." Or did the Fuehrer have a special reason for showing America, through the eyes of American correspondents, the ashes of the famous old library that was rebuilt after the last war by the dollars of sympathetic Americans and the pennies of American school children?

Here is one of the things that move saddened and disillusioned Americans to sit, in the mood of Rodin's "Thinker", and think and think and think of what civilization is coming to.

The Department of Agriculture expects 7,000 forest fires this year. Now don't go right out and start one.

From all the sound and fury poured out of Rome lately, the Duce's war will doubtless be a very terrible thing, if and when it starts.

The British people are said to feel "frustrated." No good in that. What they need is to get mad.

"The highest and best efficiency is the spontaneous cooperation of a free people."—Woodrow Wilson.

'ROUND CIRCLEVILLE.... Hour by Hour

Pages From the Diary of An Antiquated Reporter:
Another Memorial Day, a time to pause in tribute to memory of the men and women who through the long years have given their lives that we might have the United States we know today. Great as were those sacrifices they were justified, and we as a people have carried on toward the great and shining goal visualized by the founders of our country.

No American need be told that we have a glorious nation, that we have far outstripped the rest of the world, that free men are constructive thinkers. No European nation need be told that in full realization of our God-given privileges we would never relinquish them short of death.

Ours is a powerful nation, a rich nation, a nation of strong and independent men and women, a nation that can be and has been quick in forgiveness, and one that could be terrible in wrath. We have much to defend and much to give to the defense. Finally, we are stirred by realization that some of the world's most powerful nations do not see as we do and that against such nations we must prepare. Much fear has been expressed of late, but that fear is a wholesome thing, for because of it we will not be caught unaware, will stand forth so prominently in our strength and determination that none will dare attack us.

Our attitude today is as those dead heroes of past wars would have it. They loved this land of ours enough to lay down their lives for it. Those of us here now can at least live for it. We can make any sacrifices we are called on to make. What are a few dollars as compared to life and limb.

Many are the conjectures as to the possible consequences of a German victory in Europe. They are untimely, for not yet have the Germans won. Remember a quarter of a century ago when they were hammering at the gates of Paris and when everyone thought the cause of the Allies was lost, but the Kaiser ended up at Doorn? One battle does not make a war. Even if Germany should win the war Germany will have to exhaust herself to do so. And in the meantime we must continue growing in our strength. We will be prepared for any eventuality and if our might is sufficiently evident then we know that Hitler will live up to his promise that Germany would be the last nation to attack the United States. It is largely up to us whether or not that promise is kept.

MACHINE TOOLS HOARDED

WASHINGTON—One of the things which is holding up the manufacture of more military equipment for the Army and Navy is the fact that so many U. S. factories are sending machine tools to Japan.

The War Department has just finished a confidential survey of the machine tool industry and finds that most American plants are working on orders for the Japanese. Machine tools are all-important in the munitions business, because they are used to equip new factories expanding to meet new national defense orders.

As far as the War Department is able to ascertain, Japan has plenty of machine tools, and is storing many of the new shipments now received from the United States—for emergencies. Japan also continues to be a big importer of U. S. scrap iron, and also is storing it for the future.

These are two reasons why President Roosevelt has asked special powers of Congress to embargo shipments of materials which are considered vital to the defense of the United States. He expects, as soon as authorized by Congress, to slap an embargo on scrap iron and machine tools to Japan.

GOP BLASTS

The barrage of Republican blasts against a coalition Cabinet which has strafed the country recently was no spontaneous meeting of minds. Neither was it aimed entirely at the President. It was aimed much more against the Republican Party itself.

Inner GOP master minds admit that their political chances have been almost as hard hit as the shattered Allied lines in Europe. Prior to this catastrophic development GOP election prospects appeared very bright indeed.

It looked as if the campaign would be fought chiefly on Republican ground; that is, on domestic issues. Also, it was doubtful whether Roosevelt would run. But the Hitler blitzkrieg changed this situation overnight.

The Allied disaster, its ominous implications to the United States, and national defense pushed everything else into the background. The GOP no longer could take an ambiguous "peace" stand, but has been torn wide open on the war issue. Powerful elements within the party were publicly clamoring for American aid to the desperate Allies.

It is a secret of Republican congressional leaders, but they had to intervene forcibly to prevent some of their followers from introducing bills repealing the Johnson Act, which bars credits to the debt-defaulting Allies.

Meanwhile every Nazi victory drew Democratic lines closer together, cut the ground from under the inner party foes of a third term, and daily made it more certain that the President would run.

COUNTER-ATTACK

This was bad enough, and Roosevelt's move to bring one or more Republicans into the Cabinet made it worse.

To National Chairman John Hamilton, Pennsylvania boss Joe Pew, Hoover and other inner moguls, the consummation of this plan meant the finish of their election hopes. With several Republicans in

Give Appendix Chance

● MY FRIEND, Dr. Walter C. Alvarez, of the Mayo Clinic, Rochester, Minnesota, has discovered that there is no such thing as chronic appendicitis. Out here in Kansas we could have told Dr. Alvarez that twenty-five years ago. Dr. Arthur Hertzler, the "Horse and Buggy Doctor," has been preaching that doctrine for some time.

Dr. Alvarez reports on 385 cases of people who had their appendix out for what was called "chronic appendicitis." This does not mean at all patients who had their appendix out in the interval between bona fide attacks of acute appendicitis. They were operated on mostly because they had obscure digestive or abdominal complaint, or even such reflex things as headache, migraine, food sensitiveness. Many were operated on for appendicitis.

Only two of these patients could be said to have been cured. Twenty-four per cent of the patients were decidedly the worse for the operation.

Rare Disease

"It would seem that true chronic appendicitis instead of being regarded as the commonest intra-abdominal disease, should be thought of as one of the rarest."

I think the lesson from this is important, although it is not easy to state it without creating some misunderstanding in the layman's mind. Let it not be supposed, as I said above, that acute appendicitis does not recur. And it is true that when one has had an attack of acute appendicitis, this predisposes to others so that a more or less recurrent type of invalidism may result until the appendix is removed.

In a series of such cases, Dr. Alvarez found cure in nearly 70 per cent of cases.

But the typical chronic appendicitis case is one in which there is really no reason to suppose that the appendix is involved at all except by making up a theory which would make chronic appendicitis responsible for nearly everything from constipation to cyclic vomiting.

"Bucket-Shop"
The vicious thing about the situation is that there are some surgeons who are willing to take the advantage of the layman's belief that the appendix is a dangerous organ and should be removed on the slightest provocation. I said last summer that only bucket-shop surgeons took out appendices for chronic appendicitis so I am a little ahead of Dr. Alvarez on this.

It seems a curious thing that in large clinics, it is a good deal harder to persuade people not to have an operation than it is to persuade them to have an operation. A great many people like to have operations. It makes them seem important and this results in spending a great deal of money and time, and also creates a false psychology.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS
J. C.: "Can gallstones be cured any way other than by an operation?"

Answer—No stone inside a bodily cavity can be removed by dissolving. Before surgery became possible these remedies, being the only thing that mankind had, were tried over and over again. There is no dissolution for kidney stones or gallstones or salivary stones. It must stand to reason that any chemical strong enough to dissolve a kidney stone or a gallstone would also dissolve the tissue of the gallbladder and the kidney.

G. B.: "Please discuss in your column the amount of water or liquid a person should take in daily and when (at meals or otherwise), what purpose it serves, and what relation it has to the amount of food eaten; whether eating but two meals, morning and night, should limit the drinking in any way."

Answer—Water is an essential food, the most essential of all. Its first function is to replace water loss. We eliminate about three pints daily through the kidneys, about one pint through the lungs, and one and one-half pints through the skin. This means that we need about three or four quarts of water a day. Much more can be taken without harm and probably with benefit. Water holds foods in solution and aids their absorption. It removes waste products and by evaporation maintains a constant body temperature in any climate. It makes little difference whether the water is taken with the meals or between the meals. Even if the stomach is full of food, the water flows out through a kind of trough, and does not mix with the food.

WRITTEN FOR AND RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

CHAPTER TWENTY-FOUR

ON THAT Saturday evening during which rehearsal of "Maid to Measure" was such a failure, Gayle Dixon had sent the other girls home in a Merrifield car without bothering to go with them. In unhappy mood, she had not entered into the usual banter and teasing and small talk of departure, and had not accompanied them to the car.

As was his custom, too, Jeremy Tucker sought to withdraw quietly from the group when the rehearsal was over and the six girls were dismissed. He thought it was about time to go to bed. He would just say good night politely and go upstairs.

"Oh, fiddle and foey!" Adele Larraway exclaimed while they waited for the chauffeur to bring the limousine around. "It's Saturday night and there's a moon, and it's spring and I don't want to go home and sleep, Jeremy!"

She seized on that shy young gentleman, grabbing him by the arm.

"Jeremy, how'd you like a late date with six girls? It's your car. You don't have to be tucked in now, do you? Come on—let's go places!"

"I—I—" Jeremy opened his mouth for a quite involuntary protest. But he should have known better. More forceful men than he would have been helpless in the face of six young women, six who could explode laughter and impulsiveness and enthusiasm. Whatever he might have said—or conceivably he might have been drowned in chorus—femininity. There might have been one who did not gush and shriek about it, but her approval of the idea was no less plain.

Jeremy came to his senses, so to speak, when several blocks from home. To his amazement he was surrounded by loveliness. Adele sat at his right, extremely close from necessity. Hazel Green pressed into his left side. Lola Montesa was squeezed in next, holding another girl. A fifth sat on the limousine floor leaning against Jeremy's knee. And Tempe Hyde's soft body was on his lap.

The girls were singing, and a calm stranger might have detected two different songs going at once, each making up in volume what it lacked in harmony.

"For goodness sake, sing, Jeremy!" Tempe ordered, wriggling. He tried to answer, but couldn't quite make his thoughts behave, much less his tongue. He was excited, delighted, so, somehow, it was all very strange to him. He knew he was smiling, but it was a frozen, scared and therefore contradictory sort of smile, contradicting what he really felt.

It developed that some of the girls must have given an order to the good-natured Merrifield chauffeur, because he swerved from the street presently and pulled up at a big eatery whose neon sign proclaimed:

FOOD, FUN AND FESTIVITY CROWD IN

Alluring music from an orchestra assailed them and the girls all popped out of the car like birds suddenly released from a coop. And in the same figure of speech—there was a happy cackling of laughter, then the "rooster" of a party followed with a certain dignity, ignored but expected. Jeremy, ill at ease but anxious to be gay, came in behind them.

The place was large and brilliant. "Fun, food and festivity" was no exaggeration, the seven youths found. Already a number of people were present, some dancing, some sitting before drink and food. The orchestra was excellent, the decorations and furniture and general atmosphere labeled it all as one of the better places. An affable waiter hastened to Jeremy.

"Welcome, sir," the waiter greeted. "Seven in the party? . . . I'll have a special table set up for you at once. Just follow me."

They attracted considerable attention—six girls so uniformly attractive, albeit so utterly different in types, would inevitably command interest in public. Other women patrons of the place appraised them hurriedly, then turned with frank interest to inspect their man. Jeremy was a let-down for them. Of medium build only, dressed well but not exceedingly so, spectacles with rims that were unnecessarily heavy—Jeremy just didn't stack up to the distinction of the girls he had escorted here. Until, that is, somebody recognized him.

"Hi there, Tucker!" a voice called. "Jeremy Tucker! . . . HEY!" Jeremy Tucker!

To be sure, this was the young man in the society news recently! The Merrifield heir, rich as all get-out. His pictures had been in the papers. A party this week. Sure. Jeremy swallowed. Shyness and misery assailed him, but he turned to the hearty voice and smiled at the youth behind it. There was one of the boys who had come to a party, he knew. He felt that some greeting in turn was essential, so in sheer desperation he shouted back: "Hi there—ah—Butch!"

He had heard the slangy nickname "Butch" tossed around by the young folk in his grandfather's home on occasion. He had sort of missed the careless ugliness of it, the comradeship its use connoted. And it seemed to be a happy hunch now.

The fellow "Butch," assuming friendship he had a right to expect, came to them and shook hands, greeting all the girls, inviting them to join his own party. After another whirlwind five minutes Jeremy found himself in the midst of a purely impromptu gathering of people he scarcely knew. They were laughing and talking and cutting up in the easy, happy abandon of young people everywhere. It had not been necessary for him to say or do much more about it; he had simply moved along with the stream of events, smiling (a smile is a safe thing always, Gayle had coached him) and nodding sometimes.

Nevertheless, an acute confusion had enveloped him. For one thing, he felt the many eyes that were directed at him. Men in the big room looked mostly at the rare assemblage of pretty girls, but a great many people seemed to stare at Jeremy, too. The happy-go-lucky fellow nicknamed Butch had been sitting with two more girls, it developed, and so that left him and Jeremy squiring not six, but eight lovely somebodies now. In a way, it was a heavenly circumstance, but in another way it was distressing. Jeremy was plainly flushed, nervous, ill at ease, even though stimulated. He finished at the white tablecloth. He licked his lips. He glanced from one girl to the other, at the staring people, and back again.

He was not sure just how long a warm something had been holding his hand under cover of the tablecloth, but presently he became conscious of it, and it gave a gentle

There is no solvent for kidney stones or gallstones or salivary stones. It must stand to reason that any chemical strong enough to dissolve a kidney stone or a gallstone would also dissolve the tissue of the gallbladder and the kidney.

G. B.: "Please discuss in your column the amount of water or liquid a person should take in daily and when (at meals or otherwise), what purpose it serves, and what relation it has to the amount of food eaten; whether eating but two meals, morning and night, should limit the drinking in any way."

Answer—Water is an essential food, the most essential of all. Its first function is to replace water loss. We eliminate about three pints daily through the kidneys, about one pint through the lungs, and one and one-half pints through the skin. This means that we need about three or four quarts of water a day. Much more can be taken without harm and probably with benefit. Water holds foods in solution and aids their absorption. It removes waste products and by evaporation maintains a constant body temperature in any climate. It makes little difference whether the water is taken with the meals or between the meals. Even if the stomach is full of food, the water flows out through a kind of trough, and does not mix with the food.

WRITTEN FOR AND RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

CHAPTER TWENTY-FOUR

ON THAT Saturday evening during which rehearsal of "Maid to Measure" was such a failure, Gayle Dixon had sent the other girls home in a Merrifield car without bothering to go with them. In unhappy mood, she had not entered into the usual banter and teasing and small talk of departure, and had not accompanied them to the car.

As was his custom, too, Jeremy Tucker sought to withdraw quietly from the group when the rehearsal was over and the six girls were dismissed. He thought it was about time to go to bed. He would just say good night politely and go upstairs.

"Oh, fiddle and fooley!" Adele Laraway exclaimed while they waited for the chauffeur to bring the limousine around. "It's Saturday night and there's a moon, and it's spring and I don't want to go home and sleep, Jeremy!"

She seized on that shy young gentleman, grabbing him by the arm.

"Jeremy, how'd you like a late date with six girls? It's your car. You don't have to be tucked in now, do you? Come on—let's go places!"

"I—I—" Jeremy opened his mouth for a quite involuntary protest. But he should have known better. More forceful men than he would have been helpless in the face of six young women, six who could explode laughter and impulsiveness and enthusiasm. Whatever he might have said—or conceived of—was drowned in chorusing femininity. There might have been one who did not gush and shriek about it, but her approval of the idea was no less plain.

Jeremy came to his senses, so to speak, when several blocks from home. To his amazement he was surrounded by loveliness. Adele sat at his right, extremely close from necessity. Hazel Green pressed into his left side. Lola Montessa was squeezed in next, holding another girl. A fifth sat on the limousine floor leaning against Jeremy's knee. And Tempe Hyde's soft body was on his lap.

The girls were singing, and a calm stranger might have detected two different songs going at once, each making up in volume what it lacked in harmony.

"For goodness sake, sing, Jeremy!" Tempe ordered, wriggling. He tried to answer, but couldn't quite make his thoughts behave, much less his tongue. He was excited, delightfully so, somehow. It was all very strange to him. He knew he was smiling, but it was a frozen, scared and therefore contradictory sort of smile, contradicting what he really felt.

It developed that some of the girls must have given an order to the good-natured Merrifield chauffeur, because he swerved from the street presently and pulled up at a big eatery whose neon sign proclaimed:

FOOD, FUN AND FESTIVITY CROWD IN

Alluring music from an orchestra assailed them and the girls all popped out of the car like birds suddenly released from a coop. And in the same figure of speech, there was a happy cackling of laughter, then the "rooster" of the party followed with a certain dignity, ignored but expected. Jeremy, ill at ease but anxious to be gay, came in behind them.

The place was large and brilliant. "Fun, food and festivity" was no exaggeration, the seven youths found. Already a number of people were present, some dancing, some sitting before the bar, and the orchestra was excellent, with rations and furniture and general atmosphere labeled it all as one of the better places. An affable waiter hastened to Jeremy.

"Welcome, sir!" the waiter greeted. "Seven in the party? . . . I'll have a special table set up for you at once. Just follow me."

They attracted considerable attention—six girls so uniformly attractive, albeit so utterly different in types, would inevitably command interest in public. Other women patrons of the place appraised them hurriedly, then turned with frank interest to inspect their man. Jeremy was a let-down for them. Of medium build, only dressed well but not exceedingly so, spectacles with rims that were unnecessarily heavy—Jeremy just didn't stack up to the distinction of the girls he had escorted here. Until, that is, somebody recognized him.

"Hi there, Tucker!" a voice called. "Jeremy Tucker! . . . HEY!" Jeremy Tucker!

To be sure, this was the young man in the society news recently! The Merrifield, rich as all get-out, his pictures had been in the papers. A party this week. Sure.

Jeremy swallowed. Shyness and misery assailed him, but he turned to the hearty voice and smiled at the youth behind it. There was one of the boys who had come to his party, he knew. He felt that some greeting in turn was essential, so in sheer desperation he shouted back: "Hi there—ah—Butch!"

He had heard the slangy nickname "Butch" tossed around by the young folk in his grandfather's home on occasion. He had sort of admired the careless ugliness of it, the comradeship its use connoted. And it seemed to be a happy hunch now.

The fellow "Butch," assuming friendship he had a right to expect, came to them and shook hands, greeting all the girls, inviting them to join his own party. After another whirlwind five minutes Jeremy found himself in the midst of a purely impromptu gathering of people he scarcely knew. They were laughing and talking and cutting up in the easy, happy abandon of young people everywhere. It had not been necessary for him to say or do much more about it; he had simply moved along with the stream of events, smiling (a smile is a safe thing always, Gayle had coached him) and nodding sometimes.

Nevertheless, an acute confusion had enveloped him. For one thing, he felt the many eyes that were directed at him. Men in the big roadhouse looked mostly at the rare assemblage of pretty girls, but a great many people seemed to stare at Jeremy, too. The happy-go-lucky fellow nicknamed Butch had been sitting with two more girls, it developed, and so that left him and Jeremy squiring not six, but eight lovely somebodies now. In a way, it was a heavenly circumstance, but in another way it was distressing. Jeremy was plainly flushed, nervous, ill at ease, even though stimulated. He fingered at the white tablecloth. He licked his lips. He glanced from one girl to the other, at the staring people, and back again.

He was not sure just how long a warm something had been holding his hand under cover of the tablecloth, but presently he became conscious of it, and it gave a gentle squeeze. He turned to face Lola Montessa, who sat nearest him, and whose exquisitely beautiful face was flushed with excitement, too. "Is a place to be happy," she coached him in a whisper. "Me, I am excited, too. People look at us, Jeremie. Do not mind. Laugh, and say theengs. I—I am near you!"

That last was spoken so confidentially, so intimately and sweetly, that its effect was almost sedative to him. He looked at Lola, close up. He perceived that she was a shy person, even as he was; that she was nevertheless filled with the grandeur of youth, the hope and optimism and yearning of young people, the yearning to be a part of one's own age and kind.

Quickly, then, Jeremy squeezed her hand in return and was immensely thrilled at his temerity. He had never "held hands" with any girl before; he could not understand the magic effect of it, but he knew it was good.

For him the party became marvelous.

He didn't know how, nor why, but in the mysterious chemistry of friendship and fellowship Jeremy Tucker relaxed. For a while there he found that he could talk. Talk easily, without the pink warmth that so often crept up the sides of his neck. Talk gaily, even with a mild joking manner at times, and laugh at the right places in the right tones, and see the others feel no sense of strangeness concerning him. It was the second time recently that he had felt—and had actually been "accepted"—casually and enjoyably by people his own age. To one who has never been shy, the incalculable, precious worth of this is quite beyond understanding, but somehow Jeremy sensed that pretty Lola knew.

All at once Jeremy wished that Bill Bailey were present. He thought of Bill with a sudden warmth of friendliness. He wished he might here demonstrate to Bill that he, Jeremy, was a regular fellow, a ladies' man and a man's man.

He thought, too, of Gayle. Now Gayle he held on the highest pedestal of all. She had long ago sensed his needs and his possibilities. He was profoundly grateful. He was thankful, too, that circumstances had caused him to be enveloped in this whirl of femininity and gaily tonight. He felt his very soul expanding.

Later, when the moment of departure came, he discovered that he could act with admirable masculine force.

"I'm paying the check myself, Butch," he stated, firmly. "It is a pleasure I wouldn't miss."

It was just over $14, and he left a substantial tip as well. Which, again, was the first time Jeremy Tucker had ever thought to do such a thing.

COTTONWOOD LEAF BEETLE FEEDING ON LEAF

Keep an Eye Open for Cottonwood Leaf Beetles

Another enemy which should be on the blacklist of every gardener is the Cottonwood leaf beetle. These beetles spend the winter under tree bark and in trash on the ground among trees. Early in the Spring, these pests become active and develop a voracious appetite. They feed on the young, tender shoots of willows and poplars. In addition to feeding on the foliage, the beetles lay clusters of eggs on the undersides of the leaves. The larvae, or grubs, hatched from these eggs also feed on the underside of the foliage causing the leaves to become skeletonized. There are many broods of these beetles each year, sometimes as many as five.

The adult beetle in its feeding forays eats out irregular holes in the leaves, as shown in the accompanying Garden-Graph. The beetle is about 1/2 inch long, and has yellowish colored wings marked with elongated black spots.

To control these pests spray suspected trees early with arsenate of lead, using 1 1/2 pounds to 50 gallons of water. It is important that the spray thoroughly wet the undersides of the leaves.

Today's Garden-Graph

Keep an Eye Open for Cottonwood Leaf Beetle

Another enemy which should be on the blacklist of every gardener is the Cottonwood leaf beetle. These beetles spend the winter under tree bark and in trash on the ground among trees. Early in the Spring, these pests become active and develop a voracious appetite. They feed on the young, tender shoots of willows and poplars. In addition to feeding on the foliage, the beetles lay clusters of eggs on the undersides of the leaves. The larvae, or grubs, hatched from these eggs also feed on the underside of the foliage causing the leaves to become skeletonized. There are many broods of these beetles each year, sometimes as many as five.

The adult beetle in its feeding forays eats out irregular holes in the leaves, as shown in the accompanying Garden-Graph. The beetle is about 1/2 inch long, and has yellowish colored wings marked with elongated black spots.

To control these pests spray suspected trees early with arsenate of lead, using 1 1/2 pounds to 50 gallons of water. It is important that the spray thoroughly wet the undersides of the leaves.

is safe to rely on elders or old friends, although all strangers are not to be shunned. Changes hold some benefits.

A child born on this day is likely to have some talents out of the ordinary, with much originality and imagination. It may be impressionable, intuitive and possibly mystical.

The hiddenite is a gem found only in North Carolina. It is sometimes called the lithia emerald, and is more brilliant than the true emerald, the color ranging from pale yellow to deep yellow green.

That Trojan horse, like many a race nag, sneaks up on the inside.

About This And That In Many Sports

Another school year has ended with Circleville High School athletes looking back on some successes and some downfalls. . . All in all Circleville fans, ye janitor believes, are convinced that progress was shown in practically all sports during this year. . . The football team developed into a battling one that knew its way around and at times proved to be good as any in south central Ohio. . . The Greenfield victory could be counted as the highlight of the year since the victory was the first over a major opponent for a couple of years. . . The basketball team was the scrappiest Circleville has boasted since the one that won the CBL title back in about 1932, coming from behind on the Delaware court to knock off a highly favored quintet. . . Lack of height took its toll from the Red and Black five, but there was nothing that could take the team's scrap from it. . . Two highlights figured in the season, one the upset of Lancaster's Golden Gales on the Fairfield court and the other the defeat of Ashville, the team that eventually won the county title. . . The Tigers counted more than 50 points on Ashville, a total that had not been reached for sometime. . . The track and field team was handicapped by the inadequacy of its home field. . . The boys Coach Roy Black had in spiked shoes during the spring did quite well, though, and there are no regrets. . . The golf team tied for the South Central title with Washington C. H. and has been trying to get the Blue Lion quartet to stand still long enough to play off the tie. . . There is still a possibility that the playoff may be arranged.

The outlook for next season in all sports is bright, although several of the year's outstanding stars will be missing. . . There were nine senior lettermen on the football team, some of them not regulars. . . Six of the gridiron lettermen were juniors and a like number were sophomores. . . The seniors were Harold Smith, Bob Bowsler, Paul Walters, Hamcel Warner, Howard Orr, Jim Shea, Tom Harden and Melvin Thompson. . . The basketball team will be built around Joe Staley, the only letterman returning for the next team. . . Smith, Whitey Davis, Walters and Bowsler are passing on. . . Staley, who played guard last year, may be moved to a forward, according to Coach Roy Black's plans. . . The reserve team did a good job last year, missing the SCO reserve title by a single field goal, and several of the athletes of that team are expected to move up for the varsity next fall. . . The track team loses some good boys, but has some more good ones coming along. . . Ted Moon is the only boy to be lost from the golf team, the other three members of the quartet having two years of competition remaining.

All in all the outlook isn't so bad for next year. . . Incidentally, nine grid games have been scheduled, seven of them at home. All are under the lights.

WILMINGTON, May 30—Charles W. Ramey, Portsmouth, has been named head football coach and director of physical education at Wilmington High School, succeeding Amos Smith, who resigned after 10 years' service.

Virgil Bullen, assistant coach under Smith for two years, will be head basketball coach and assistant physical education director. Names of other high school and elementary teachers employed for the next year were announced.

Patrols of eight Scouts each from troops in all three counties will attempt to earn a Camporee insignia by taking part in the many events and contests of the Camporee. Patrols must receive 800 out of a possible 1000 points to qualify for the award.

Packcraft, campcraft, camp equipment, camp menus, safety and sanitation, program and activities, patrol organization and leadership, patrol spirit and morale, final clean up and inspection and contests in several Scouting skills will be the basis of the Camporee insignia award.

All parents and friends of Scouting are invited to attend the three county Court of Honor Saturday evening at 7:30 at the camp. Church services will be held in camp for Protestant Scouts and provision will be made for Scouts of other faiths to attend services in Lancaster.

Scouters attending the Camporee will be permitted to use the cabins at Camp Ki-Y-Ro. Scouts will pitch tents in regular Camporee style.

FIRE UNCOVERS HISTORY

Outlook for Graduates Best in Three Years

MINNEAPOLIS, May 30—Employment prospects for 1940 graduates from American colleges and universities are brighter than in the three previous years, or in 1933, according to preliminary results of a national survey made public here today by King Merritt, vice-president of Investors Syndicate.

Ninety percent of the 299 institutions of higher learning in the survey reported that 50 percent or more of their 1940 graduates will have steady jobs before the end of this summer.

Job prospects the same as or greater than those of June 1939, were predicted by 91 percent of the schools replying to the questionnaire.

Ninety-two percent of the co-educational and men's colleges predicted that 50 percent or more of their male graduates would be attached to a regular payroll within ninety days of graduation. Eighty-nine percent of the co-educational and women's colleges estimated that 50 percent or more of their female graduates would be gainfully employed before autumn started.

Outlook for positions the same as or greater than those of June, 1939, was forecast by 93 percent of the co-educational and male universities for their male graduates this year. Job prospects the same as or greater than those of June, 1939, were predicted by 89 percent of the co-educational and women's institutions for their 1940 female graduates. Prospects for jobs the same as or greater than those of June, 1938, were forecast by 90 percent of the co-educational and men's universities for their 1940 male graduates. Outlook for positions the same as or greater than those of June, 1938, were predicted by 85.6 percent of the co-educational and women's institutions for their 1940 women graduates.

The Cabinet and Roosevelt heading the Democratic ticket, the GOP wouldn't have a chance.

Something had to be done fast to block this. After a series of hurriedly called secret conferences and much long-distance telephoning, a two-pronged counter-offensive was launched, one aimed at the President, and the other at Colonel Frank Knox plus other Republicans who might be offered Cabinet posts.

The barrage on Roosevelt was opened by Colonel Lindbergh's speech pooh-poohing any invasion danger. In inner G.O.P. circles this is credited to Hoover via his close friend, William Castle, former Under Secretary of State. Castle has advised Lindbergh on most of his speeches, accompanied him to the radio station when he made this one.

This was followed up with the carefully spaced statements by Landon, Hoover, Representative Wadsworth, House Floor Leader Martin and others demanding that the President renounce a third term as the price for G.O.P. participation in the Cabinet.

The counter-attack within the party was largely undercover. Heavy pressure was brought on Knox not to accept a Cabinet offer, and it was strongly intimated that any Republican who did accept a Roosevelt Cabinet appointment would be vigorously opposed for confirmation.

be very few in number compared to the thousands of men between 18 and 25. But there will be three or four schools especially assigned to training them as part of an experiment by the Civil Aeronautics Authority.

For several years the CAA has been fostering the development of co-called safety planes; that is, ships that are spin-proof. Spins are the cause of most crashes. Several such craft are now on the market and to further their use, the CAA will offer free flying instruction to men and women above the regulation age limit.

Anyone who can pass a physical examination is eligible to take the course. This consists of 45 hours flying instruction in one of the safety planes, and if the student cares to continue, he can have another 30 hours course in an ordinary plane. The only cost is $6 for the physical examination and $3 for the insurance. The youngster training program will make available to non-college youths the same flying instruction that 10,000 college students received this school year. It will run from June 15 to September

1 and will be given in 550 private training centers which the CAA had surveyed in anticipation of exactly this kind of emergency. Each student will receive 70 hours ground training and between 35 and 50 hours flight instruction.

Castle has advised Lindbergh on most of his speeches, accompanied him to the radio station when he made this one.

This was followed up with the carefully spaced statements by Landon, Hoover, Representative Wadsworth, House Floor Leader Martin and others demanding that the President renounce a third term as the price for G.O.P. participation in the Cabinet.

The counter-attack within the party was largely undercover. Heavy pressure was brought on Knox not to accept a Cabinet offer, and it was strongly intimated that any Republican who did accept a Roosevelt Cabinet appointment would be vigorously opposed for confirmation.

OLDSTER AVIATORS
The President didn't mention it when he announced the new expanded civil pilot training program, but oldsters as well as youngsters now can learn to fly. Of course the older people will be very few in number compared to the thousands of men between 18 and 25. But there will be three or four schools especially assigned to training them as part of an experiment by the Civil Aeronautics Authority.

For several years the CAA has been fostering the development of co-called safety planes; that is, ships that are spin-proof. Spins are the cause of most crashes. Several such craft are now on the market and to further their use, the CAA will offer free flying instruction to men and women above the regulation age limit.

Anyone who can pass a physical examination is eligible to take the course. This consists of 45 hours flying instruction in one of the safety planes, and if the student cares to continue, he can have another 30 hours course in an ordinary plane. The only cost is $6 for the physical examination and $3 for the insurance.

The youngster training program will make available to non-college youths the same flying instruction that 10,000 college students received this school year. It will run from June 15 to September

1 and will be given in 550 private training centers which the CAA had surveyed in anticipation of exactly this kind of emergency. Each student will receive 70 hours ground training and between 35 and 50 hours flight instruction.
